BROKEN PROMISES.

The one thing for which, above all others, the republican party is celebrated caring for the soldiers of the union and the nation to the defenders of the union cannot be measured by laws." Repeatedly similar protestations of regard for the old soldiers have found place in republican party enunciations. Presiden terances calculated to win the soldier vote. How well these expressines comport with the conduct of the administration is shown in the case of Mrs. Jennings, who was until recently postmistress at Highland Park, a suburb o Chicago. Mrs. Jennings is the widow of a soldier of the union army, highly reswas appointed postmistress a year before the expiration of President Arthur's term. When Cleveland became presi dent a democratic aspirant for the place obtained some signatures to a petition for his appointment, and forwarded it to Washington. Other residents of Highland Park informed the president of the facts regarding Mrs. Jennings, and he refused to remove her, on the ground that she was the widow of a union soldier and a capable servant of the people, She retained the office until ten days ago, when she received noticed from Washington to turn the property of the government over to her successor, Arthut M. Beyington, a young man, son of a wealthy father, and who has been quite active about the town primaries

Perhaps had Mrs. Jennings been a voter she might have fared better at the hands of the republican administration. As she is only a woman without a vote, for whom the republican party is so profusely pledged to care, she is treated with no consideration whatever. The political rustler. President Cleveland, in an unpretentious manner, observed the claim of Mrs. Jennings to a position under the government which she filled open the claim of Mrs. Jennings to a position obliged to travel scores of miles, in some obligation of the scores of miles, in some obligation of the scores of miles, in acceptably, while the pharasaical ad- instances a two days' ride from ministration of President Harrison, pro- home, prospectors and miners who are fessing a love for the soldiers and sol- compelled to make weary journeys over workers at the polls.
